Christina Woods

If you're like me, you love a gallery visit with the great masters, regional work of this place we call Duluth, and work of emerging artists. What I also love are exhibitions that stretch the boundaries of my identity.

The Duluth Art Institute is proud to present just that, an opportunity to engage with the constructs of race and its impact in our community. Our fall exhibitions demonstrate our effort to decolonize the institute in order to make space for absent narratives.

We have been working on this since 2017 with exhibitions about homelessness, Anishinaabe teachings, and what it's like to be profiled.

This fall, we bring the MN Black Fine Art Show which opens our minds up to the true impact of race and white privilege. You have not seen such direct representation of the issues around impact as in this show. Jean: The Inspiration behind the Birkenstein Arts Movement is the basis of teaching youth the power of art to make change in the community. This art retrospective highlights the inherent dignity of Black and Native Americans during a time when that ideal was deeply challenged, much like today. The Birkenstein Art Movement is a year-long DAI program for middle school students using art to manifest positive social change. These youth learn to use their voice to identify a challenge and make a plan for change. Akinomaage, by Vern Northrup found its way to MN State Capitol where he and the DAI make history as both the first exhibition and the first Anishinaabe narrative under the public art legislation.

We have also integrated art class scholarships for all ages that require no more than a phone call expressing interest, furthering our vision for equity and art for all.

The DAI is focused on art for all and all for art. We envision equity in exhibition and learning opportunities, diverse narratives, and inclusive participation in order to build community. We are asking the questions "How do we tell our story" and "Who is included and who is locked out". The DAI has diversified its board of directors to include new voices and broad perspectives. I am grateful to this board for recognizing the power in hiring an Anishinaabekwe into a leadership role where only a handful of organizations nationwide have done so. I also appreciate the support the board gives to the DAI staff to be bold and forward thinking. The DAI has truly moved into meaningful inclusion.

As we continue to shape the civic spaces where we can gather and the exhilarating work of building community, we ask for your financial support. This fall we have five ways you can support this work at the DAI. Whether it is with your membership, attending the masquerade gala, shopping at the HoliDAI Market or on our website, or end of year giving. We ask you to help the DAI achieve excellence through the vision we have to include those who are typically excluded from galleries through making a financial commitment to the DAI. Please donate today online, join us at our fundraising events, become a member, and remember the DAI at the end of the year. Visit our website for more details, and we look forward to seeing you in our galleries and classes.

Akinomaage: Teaching from the Earth, a book by Vern Northrup, is now available for purchase in the DAI webstore. The book is a compilation of his images and Anishinaabe philosophy.

Vern Northrup's artwork is on view in the Minnesota State Capitol's third floor gallery (Room 320 and 321) until November 2019. The artwork on view is also available for purchase on the DAI webstore.

Integrated Vision: Laura Andrews & Paula Gudmundson

December 2019 - March 2020 | George Morrison Gallery
Reception: February 6, 5 - 8 PM

Digital landscapes and meditative harmonies invite viewers to find respite and connect with the surrounding world in Integrated Vision; a collaborative exhibition by Laura Andrews and Paula Gudmundson. Large scale images of nature will float on the walls of the Morrison Gallery, documenting the ever-changing state of our environment. Slow, thoughtful music projects a state of fluidity, transcending reality.

Minneapolis based visual artist Laura Andrews examines the relationships and interactions between people and the natural world. Shooting footage for Tunnel 2 on the family tree farm where she learned to paint, Andrews captures the melancholic and nostalgic emotions accompanying change. Local Duluthian, Paula Gudmundson echoes this sentiment with improvised flute melodies, capturing the meditative quality of being... just being in nature. Together, both artists are questioning how one connects with our environment and how art can evoke curiosity about what is unfolding in nature, challenging society's value on staying busy.

Andrews is a landscape painter teaching drawing and painting at Minneapolis College. She has shown her work throughout the Midwest and explains that the low definition videos in Integrated Vision evoke a painterly quality and aim to provide a sensation of moving through space. Classically trained flutist, Paula Gudmundson is an Assistant Professor at the University of Minnesota Duluth. Performing nationally and internationally, Gudmundson began to improvise musically during her travels and explains, "Improv allows me to tap into different senses and with practice, becomes meditative." Together, Andrews and Gudmundson create a space for viewers to reflect, contemplate, and integrate the senses.

Shannon Cousino

October - December, 2019
Corridor Gallery

Shannon Cousino's work resonates with intensity, evoking raw emotions of hope and longing. This series taps into her personal journey seeking strength and celebration following the haunting and burning called up from loss. The work captures movement and fluidity while mirroring the perceived staticity one feels in the depths of grief. The large-scale wood cut prints evolved from photography, layer text, and stylized renderings of the heart over self-portraits. The foreshortened figure of What Doesn't Kill You fills the page, filigree design drops behind the figure symbolizing the carved façade of one in grief. According to Cousino, echoes the noise that surrounds grieving. Filigree flanks the figure in The New Normal and both images are accented with gold, smooth and reflective; inspired by Medieval illuminated manuscripts documenting stories of life and death. Cousino reflects on her current work, "This series focuses on themes of personal transformation through tragedy and the verbal clichés that are often said during attempts to comfort."

Cousino, Senior Lecturer at the University of Wisconsin – Superior and Adjunct Instructor at the College of St. Scholastica, has exhibited locally, regionally, and internationally. Her work has been collected by the Tweed Museum of Art and was awarded the 52nd Arrowhead Biennial Best of Show.

City Hall

Public art provides an avenue of expression, attracts attention, and brings meaning into our everyday lives. The Duluth Public Arts Commission and the Duluth Art Institute are proud to partner throughout 2019, installing artwork in the City Hall Rotunda and the Mayor's Reception Room. Collectively, we celebrate and honor local artists as we bring our community together through the visual arts.

Our Neighbors Exhibiting Artists from CHOICE, unlimited

October - December, 2019
City Hall Rotunda

CHOICE, unlimited serves adults with developmental disabilities, opening doors to employment and opportunity to people in our community. Their programming includes a studio class in visual arts and we are excited to showcase a selection of their work in our ongoing partnership with the City of Duluth. Participants experiment with a variety of mediums and styles to explore their talents and develop individual expression. Techniques like soft pastel, collage, and watercolor reveal studies in organic shapes, typography, and color composition. The weekly classes empower artists to make informed choices in their creative work by bringing awareness to personal values, identifying emotions, and generating symbolism.

Stop in City Hall to enjoy this shared experience in building community.

MASQUERADE GALA

*November 2, 5 PM
St. Louis County Depot*

This year our enthusiasm for the arts will “Pop” throughout the Great Hall and in the DAI galleries. Will Marilyn Monroe make an appearance? Or will David Hockney be the one making a “Splash”? Will Elaine Sturtevant give us “vertigo”? Not only does this event promise a pop art inspired and art-filled night-out, but the funds raised provide critical support for the Duluth Art Institute.

At the Gala, you will enjoy a happy hour with an aerialist performance, a 3-course sit down meal from Duluth Grill, a gift from an artist table-host that you will get to know over the course of the evening, the opportunity to bid on silent auction items inspired by the neighborhoods and communities the Duluth Art Institute serves, and a Drag Performance at the conclusion of the evening. The Fund-A-Need at last year’s event was such a success that we have decided to continue it again this year and bring class scholarships with us into 2020.

This event is made possible by our generous donors including this year’s sponsor at the Artist Sponsor level: Krenzen. The Duluth Art Institute thanks Krenzen for their generous support of artists and for their commitment to the Duluth Art Institute Mission.

The Duluth Art Institute enriches daily life with dynamic, innovative visual arts programming that upholds excellence and promotes inclusive community participation.

Tickets can be purchased at duluthartinstitute.org or by calling our business office at 218-733-7560. Make sure to get yours before October 20!

Addison Mueller and Bob DeArmond Join the DAI Team

I am currently in my junior year of college studying Graphic Design at the University of Minnesota Duluth. Following graduation, I plan to continue my education in grad school studying medical illustration. I am from southern Minnesota, where I enjoy spending my summers hiking, kayaking, and continuing work on my portfolio. In Duluth, I enjoy getting to explore the city and surrounding area. Whether it's down by the lake or through a quiet neighborhood, there is always a beautiful sight to see. I'm excited to be joining the DAI as the Development and Operations Assistant.

I come from a long background of working in the arts and arts administration. Upon graduating from UMD in 1971, I worked as a full-time potter in the state of Virginia and then established my own shop and studio in Duluth. When the Duluth Art Institute was moving into the Depot, I was hired as the Executive Director, a job I held for eight years. From there I took the position of Development Director at KUMD, Duluth Public Radio, on the campus of UMD. I finished my career in arts administration as the Executive Director of the Arrowhead Regional Arts Council, a position I held for 30 years.

In my new position as Clay Studio Manager, I plan to mix my organizational skills with the opportunity to get back in the studio producing pots and teaching. I am looking forward to reacquainting myself with the Duluth Art Institute and the artists we serve.

Lincoln Park Building Private Artist Studio For Rent

The Duluth Art Institute Lincoln Park Building houses many different activities such as a Printmaking Studio, Ceramics Studio, DAI offices, multi-purpose studio space, classes for youth and adults, summer art camps, and more. We also have a private artist studio that has been used in many different facets over the years. Most recently, we have been leasing this private studio space to artists.

This 14' x 19' space is currently available. The studio features large north-facing windows, several 110 electrical outlets, and two story ceilings with a lofted storage space. A shared restroom, refrigerator, and microwave are available on the same floor.

Anyone that is interested in or has questions about the private artist studio should contact our Education Program Manager, Michelle Misgen, at mmisgen@duluthartinstitute.org.

Matt Kania

Born in the heart of Chicago and later raised in the farm country of Illinois, at an early age Matt Kania was instilled with a deep appreciation for both urban environments and wide open spaces. In fact, to this day, Matt tends to thrive and feel equally at home in a fast paced city and in the quiet of a far removed wilderness. As a result, Kania's imagery tends to be eclectic – sometimes focusing on themes based in culture and at other times looking at themes that revolve around the natural world. As Kania says, “The commonality in my work is a reflection of the view that ‘all experiences are equal.’” A deeply rooted love for Lake Superior and northern landscapes eventually landed Kania in Duluth, Minnesota – where today he can be seen carrying his paint box to environs around the lake to paint ‘en plein air’ or mixing paints in his studio to work on his next composition.

Why did you become a DAI Member?

Art and art making is a vital part of my life. And supporting an arts organization means that I'm supporting other artists – including myself! The Duluth Art Institute is the perfect avenue for contributing to the collective arts energy in our community. Several years ago when I was considering whether I'd like to move to Duluth, the Duluth Art Institute was a deciding factor - knowing there was a strong art scene and a supportive arts organization made the decision to move an easy one!

How has art impacted you or your community?

There's nothing that gives me more energy to create than to see other artists doing their thing! I love seeing murals pop up around town. I love going to art exhibition openings. I love seeing artists offering their works for sale in our neighborhood galleries and shops. I truly live in a vibrant arts community and most of my friends are artists that live and work here in Duluth and Superior.

As an art enthusiast, what opportunities do you find at the DAI?

Duluth Art Institute gives me opportunities to exhibit my own works – either through the annual Members Show, by submitting a proposal for solo exhibition, or responding to call for artists in group exhibitions. And throughout the year, there are always classes offered by Duluth Art Institute that spark my creative interest and serve as an avenue for art exploration. I recently joined the DAI's “Print Club” - which has given me an opportunity to work alongside of other printmaking artists.
